Index Description
- The index universe is defined as all component companies of the 25 developed-market country indexes in the Dow Jones Global Indexes (DJGI) family.
- To be considered for the index, companies in the index universe must pass eligibility screens for dividend quality and liquidity. The company must:
  - Pay a current dividend.
  - Have a current-year dividend-per-share ratio that is greater than or equal to its five-year average annual dividend-per-share ratio.
  - Have a five-year average payout ratio of less than or equal to 60% for U.S. and European companies; or less than or equal to 80% for all other countries.
  - Have a minimum three-month daily average trading volume of $3 million.
- Stocks meeting all eligibility requirements are ranked by favoring current Index components:
  - Stocks in the Index universe are ranked in descending order by indicated annual dividend yield, defined as a stock's unadjusted indicated annual dividend (not including any special dividends) divided by its unadjusted price.
  - All current Index component stocks that are among the top 150 stocks are included in the Index.
  - Noncomponent stocks are added to the Index based on their rankings until the component count reaches 100.
  - Component weightings are assigned based on dividend yield. Weights of individual component stocks are capped at 10%.
- The Index is reconstituted and adjusted annually in March.
